Tolkien's Toponyms in the Original and the Croatian translation

Glossary

The glossary of toponyms from Tolkien's trilogy represents the basis of the analysis presented in:

Huljenić, Danijela; Macan, Željka. 2023. "Tolkien's Toponyms in the Original and the Croatian translation". In Meaning in Language – from Individual to Collective, ed. Matešić, Mihaela; Memišević, Anita. Berlin: Peter Lang. 105–122.

A total of 383 toponyms have been excerpted from Tolkien's trilogy, which form the basis of this research. The maps, which are integral parts of the Trilogy, have also been included. For a better understanding of the complexity of Tolkien's fictive world, it is relevant to mention the existence of multiple names that occur for the same toponym. The glossary shows the toponyms in a tabular form as they are confirmed in the original and Croatian translation. The toponyms are arranged in alphabetical order as they appear in the original and the table is divided into seven columns, the first being the ordinal number of the toponym.

This research did not tackle the elaborate system of Tolkien's languages; however, it proposes a division of languages into two categories, one being Imaginary Languages (Elvish, Dwarvish, languages of Ents, Orcs, Valar, Wargs and Black Language) presented in the second column and the other category named Common Speech (representing Westron languages of Hobbits and Men) presented in the third column. According to Tolkien (1999, Letter 144), Westron was the language spoken and understood by the protagonists of The Hobbit and The Lord of the Rings. However, Tolkien mentions that Westron was presented as having been completely replaced by English in the text. However, it is understood that outside the fictional context of the story, there was no such "translation". The English names came first and the "original" forms in Westron or other languages were devised by Tolkien later.

The fourth column represents the toponyms confirmed in the Croatian translation. All toponyms have a toponym type in the fifth column and are placed in a spatial relation to other toponyms in the sixth column. The final column is a set of comments and etymological explanations intended for translators made by Tolkien or taken from www.tolkiengateway.net, which is an online Tolkien's encyclopedia. The document is accessible online at the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences webpage - <http://izdavastvo.ffri.hr/> under the full title of this paper.
